Poem

She looks to see If she could find herself, but the sea is troubled and the water is grey.
She looks, from the distance, because she's afraid of touch, so the sand remains flat even if there is a storm.
So, she's looking from the inside, but it's not warm anymore.
She dwells in the dark because she misses light.
Now, the moon awakes but she still hasn't found what she looked for leaving behind a mess.
The night starts,
as it hasn't ended
before.
